

Why should I belong to the Wild Bird Feeding Industry?

What's in it for me?

- National Consumer Market Research- Which age or income group purchases the most feed? Which feed is purchased most frequently? Does this vary by region or season? WBF members have exclusive access to industry information that answers these questions, and more!

Anyone who wants to know the demographics and purchasing habits of the people who feed birds needs the WBF National Consumer Market Research. I see this as an unparalleled WBF membership benefit. - Reggie Vanden Bosch, Central Garden & Pet

- Crop Updates- What's happening in grain markets today? WBF members receive detailed crop updates each month, including packaging and transportation information.

- Industry Standards - Have been adopted for feed and products. The Quality Standards seal assures consumers the product they purchase meets a standard of quality. National promotion of this program benefits WBF members and consumers by ensuring a positive feeding experience and return sales.

The WBF Quality Standards Program is a great step to bring consistency to the industry when educating retail shoppers. - Mike Wulf, D&D Commodities

- Annual Meetings - Exclusive to the Wild Bird Feeding Industry, this annual event unites all aspects of the industry for networking and industry information. Special focus on key issues impacting your bottom line.

WBF has proven to be a tremendous resource and an asset to our business. - Neil Gladner, Wild Bird Centers of America

- PROJECT WILDBIRD - Over 400,000 bird visits and 94 species have been recorded since the 2005 start of this scientific research project. Comprehensive data will be available detailing which birds prefer which feed and feeders by geographic region. Visit www.projectwildbird.org for details.
